

Traveling to New Zealand

It is mandatory for all visitors to New Zealand to obtain a visa or complete New Zealand Electronic Travel Authority (NZeTA).

- Check if you need a visa or an NZeTA here.
- All visitors to New Zealand must have a passport which is valid for at least three months beyond the intended stay in New Zealand.
- Participants from countries who do not have a visa waiver arrangement with New Zealand will need to apply for a visa before they travel to New Zealand. Here is the list of visa waiver countries and territories.
- Visa timeframe: we recommend that applicants apply for a visa as early as possible, ideally more than 12 weeks before the date of intended travel. Immigration New Zealand does not have visa processing services in some countries, so it is faster and more efficient to complete online applications wherever possible.
- For more information on visa requirements to New Zealand, please refer to New Zealand Immigration or you can also contact them directly on +64 9 914 4100.
- Transit visa for Australia: if you need to travel through Australia to get to New Zealand you may need a transit visa. Some countries are eligible to transit through Australia without a transit visa, please refer here.

On arrival to New Zealand

Everyone travelling into New Zealand must complete a New Zealand Traveller Declaration \(NZTD\). You can download the NZTD App from the Google Play or Apple Store – it is free.

- Declare all risk items if you're bringing them into New Zealand.
- You must answer all questions in your declaration and produce your identity documents.
- After clearing passport control and collecting your baggage, follow the appropriate lanes through to the biosecurity screening.
- For more information, please refer to New Zealand Customs Service.

Biosecurity requirements

All arriving international passengers undergo biosecurity checks upon landing in New Zealand.

- The checks are designed to protect New Zealand’s vital horticulture and agriculture industries, as well as its unique environment, from invasive pests and diseases.
- All food, plant, and animal materials must be declared on your New Zealand Traveller Declaration. These items will be inspected by biosecurity officers. Failure to declare “risk goods” could result in a $400NZD fine or prosecution.
- Please ensure that any shoes worn on farms in your home country are thoroughly cleaned. All dirt, grass, and other debris must be removed, especially from the grooves in the soles. To avoid delays upon arrival in New Zealand, place your shoes in a plastic bag in an easily accessible part of your luggage. This will assist with inspection.
- If you plan to visit any New Zealand farms during your stay, please ensure your footwear is clean before your arrival.
- We also recommend thoroughly cleaning your shoes again, placing them in a plastic bag, and making them easily accessible for inspection when returning to your home country. You may need to declare any visits to farms in New Zealand upon your return.
- For more information, please refer to Biosecurity New Zealand.
