1. SUMMARY

Mexico is a federal constitutional republic in North America. It is bordered on the north by the United States; on the south and west by the Pacific Ocean; on the southeast by Guatemala, Belize, and the Caribbean Sea; and on the east by the Gulf of Mexico.

Currently, Mexico has a Cooperating Non Member status within the WCPFC and has been complying with all the conservation and management measures adopted in the Commission.

In Mexico, the Fisheries and Aquaculture sector is considered a strategic priority for the country's development. This industry not only provides the food that the Mexican families consume, but also supplies the raw materials for manufacturing and processing industries. Additionally, by maintaining high export dynamism, it acts as an important generator of foreign exchange.

The Secretariat of Agriculture, Livestock, Rural Development, Fisheries and Food (SAGARPA); through the National Commission for Aquaculture and Fisheries (CONAPESCA), a deconcentrated administrative body; it's responsible for the management of the fisheries and aquaculture resources of the country. This responsibility is shared as well with state governments and municipalities.

Mexico has 11,592 kilometers of coastline:

- 8,475 km correspond to the Pacific Coast.
- 3,117 km belong to the Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean Sea, including islands.
- 3 million square kilometers of Exclusive Economic Zone.

2. TABULAR ANNUAL FISHERIES INFORMATION

Although, Mexican purse seiner vessels didn't fish in the WCPFC Convention Area in 2015, there are historical fisheries in 1983 and 1984 (Table 1).

3. BACKGROUND

The Mexican Government has included in its fisheries and aquaculture public policy, a long term vision in order to encourage the national development, competitiveness and the strategic planning that it's incorporated in the National Development Plan (2013-2018) the Sectorial Program of Farming and Fishing of the SAGARPA, and the National Sector Program of Fisheries and Aquaculture. The Mexican fishing industry plays a vital role from the economic growth perspective.

Under this framework the country is governed by five strategic axis: Fisheries and Aquaculture Management integrally and sustainably, Compliance and Enforcement Policy, Strategic Development of Aquaculture, Fostering the Capitalization of Fisheries and Aquaculture, and Promoting the consumption of fishery and aquaculture products.

It is important to highlight that Mexico gives a very special attention and confers a high priority to the tuna resources of the pacific, and it is much concerned that fisheries in the Pacific Ocean be managed and conserved for sustainable use.

Consequently, Mexico is an active member of the following organizations: Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission (IATTC), International Commission for the Conservation of Atlantic Tunas (ICCAT), Agreement on the International Dolphin Conservation Program (AIDCP), The Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations (FAO); the Ocean and Fisheries Working Group of the Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation mechanism (APEC), the Latin American Fisheries Development Organization (OLDEPESCA), the Fisheries Committee of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development

(OECD), Consultant and information Services Center for Fishery Products Marketing in Latin America and the Caribbean (INFOPECSA), among others.
